QUESTION 1B

Farwest Country is a State with nuclear weapons. It has a dispute over an island, Beautiful Lady, with its neighbouring State, Nearnorth Country. Both States agreed to settle the dispute through arbitration. The award was given in favour of Nearnorth Country. Farwest Country is not happy with the decision and started an operation to invade Beautiful Lady. The surrounding States are worried since both countries have nuclear weapons, and started to urge them to resolve dispute through a peaceful settlement. Discuss the principle of peaceful settlement at international level, and all the available methods not involving adjudication that may be applied to this issue.

PART B (Answer ALL from this section)QUESTION 2

There was an insurrectional movement in State A, aiming to overthrow its existing Government. The rebel forces were gaining ground, defeating the government forces in many parts of the country. Before retreating from the capital city of State A, the government forces had destroyed all the factories and industries owned by nationals of State B.

A few days later, the government forces unconditionally surrendered. The insurrectional movement formed a new Government, headed by its leader Mr. X who became the new President of State A. Since State A was facing with economic crisis, the President on his first day of presidency passed a Presidential Decree, confiscating the assets of a multinational oil company incorporated in State C.

A few months after that, a tourist from State D was jungle-trekking in a deep forest which was declared by the Tourism Department of State A as an out of bound area where cruel aborigines were at large. He was killed by an aborigine.

Discuss how and to what extent the national States of the victims in the above-mentioned occurrences can make international claims against State A under international law.

QUESTION 4

The Unicorn was a trawler owned by the State Fishing Enterprise of Phoenicia, a sovereign State, and was on the high seas while the Dolphin, one of its boats, was fishing at sea about 110 nautical miles off the Malaysian coast, closely watched by the KD Sri Putra, a frigate of the Royal Malaysian Navy. The Dolphin then set off, shadowed by the KD Sri Putra, to the place where the Unicorn was waiting and transshipped the cargo onto the Unicorn. The KD Sri Putra signaled to the Unicorn to stop in order to do boarding and searching. Neglecting the order, the Unicorn sped up further to the open sea pursued by the KD Sri Putra. Only with the use of guns, was the KD Sri Putra able to arrest the Unicorn, which was later taken to Port Klang. The case was brought before the Magistrate Court, which decided to imprison the crew, all of whom were Phoenician nationals, and forfeited the vessel.

The Government of Phoenicia objected to the arrest on the grounds that the Unicorn had never been within Malaysian waters and never violated Malaysian laws, and that it was taking specimen of fishes only for research purposes, and that the use of guns was not necessary and reasonable and thus in breach of the lawful exercise of the right of hot pursuit. They further argued that the Malaysian court has no jurisdiction as the Unicorn was a government-owned vessel, protected by immunity and that the imprisonment of the crew and the forfeiture of the vessel were contrary to the Fisheries Act 1985.

Advise the Attorney-General's Chamber of Malaysia in accordance with international law of the sea, on the rebuttal against claims made by the Government of Phoenicia.
